STORY OF IZUMI

(IZUMI is a Japanese phrase meaning spring)

Izumi was a girl full of spring,
full of joy, she grew up as a warrior.
but it seemed the world was never ready to witness the beauty of this legacy.

They cursed her and put her in a cage,
thinking spring can never bloom out of a cage.
but my dear, spring always blooms
after the darkest of winters.

So she braced her mind, flung her katana up above the sky, leaving the world in shock.
the soft breeze danced, whispering
she was the avatar of the goddess of war.

She sat on her horse and went to faraway lands,
and so the spring of her never ended.

The poem carries a profound message about resilience, inner strength, and the indomitable spirit of an individual facing adversity. Izumi's journey from being confined in a cage to liberating herself symbolizes the human capacity to overcome challenges, no matter how daunting they may seem.

The metaphor of spring blooming after the darkest winters conveys the idea that even in the most difficult times, there is always the potential for renewal, growth, and transformation. The act of throwing her katana into the sky represents a bold and decisive break from the limitations imposed on her, signaling a departure from societal expectations and a forging of her own path.

Overall, the poem encourages readers to find strength within themselves, to face challenges head-on, and to believe in the possibility of renewal and growth even in the face of adversity. It's a celebration of resilience and the enduring spirit that can weather the harshest storms.

REMAINS

Inked Resentment: A Curse Unveiled

She had always hated her father, who had never supported her for years. She was glad when he died in a car crash, and she hoped he would rot in hell. She wanted to forget him and move on with her life.

But her mother had other plans. She had secretly kept some of his ashes and decided to get a tattoo with them. She wanted to honor his memory, and she wanted her daughter to do the same. She forced her to go with her to a tattoo parlour, and told her to choose a design.

She resisted, but her mother was adamant. She threatened to disown her if she didn't comply. She had no choice but to obey. She picked a small heart and hoped it would be over soon.

The tattoo artist missed the ashes with the ink and started the process. She felt a sharp pain as the needle pierced her skin, but she endured it. She thought of her father, and how much she hated him. She felt a cold sensation in her chest, as if he was still there.

She looked at the finished tattoo, and she felt a surge of horror. It was not a heart, but a face. His face. It was staring at her, with a twisted smile. She screamed, and tried to scratch it off, but it was too late. It was a part of her.

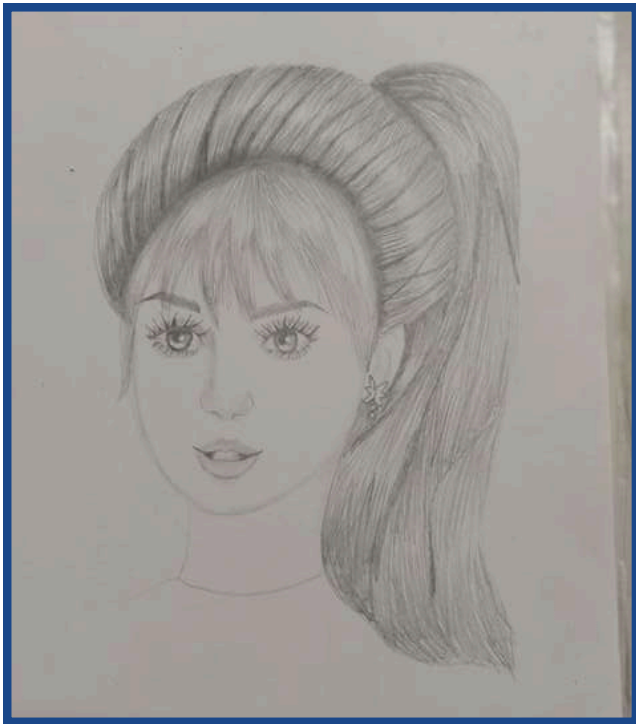

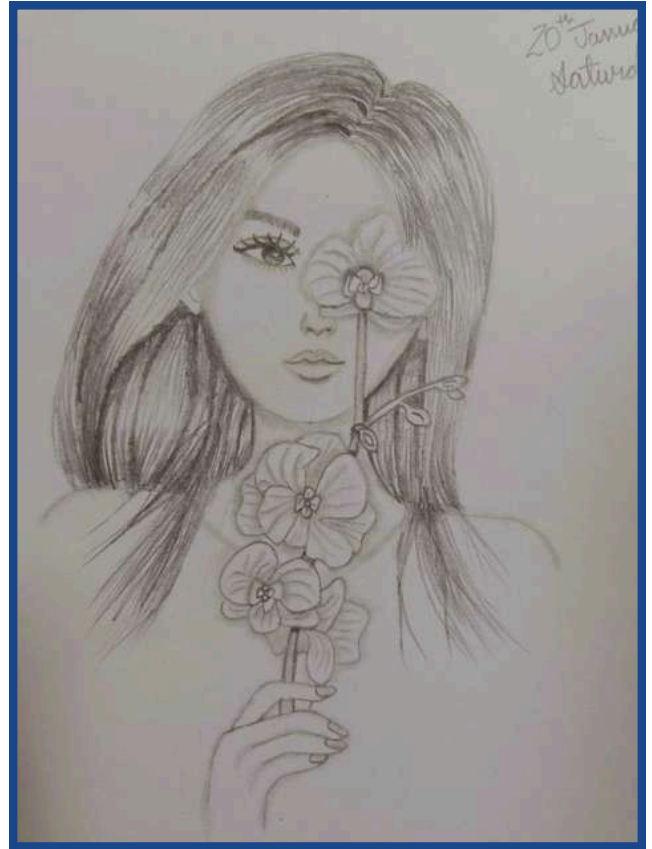

She had a tattoo, and it was more than just a tattoo. It was a remains tattoo, and it was a curse.
